Progress in Louisville, Ky.

In Louisville, Ky., the progress in commerce is not unequaled by that in education. In commerce the newest and the best ways are at once adopted, and are laid fast hold upon by the business men and women. In educational lines it is equally true. The newest and most progressive methods of education are beginning to gain a firm hold in that city. It is proven by the success of the free kindergarten system. There are now in operation 33 free kindergartens.

The Kindergarten Association of the city has a class of sixteen young ladies now in training to be kindergarten teachers. These training classes are in charge of Miss A. E. Bryan. Two classes graduate in June. A new training class will be opened in September. This training takes hold of the best that is in a young woman and develops it, making her a capable, well balanced, logical and loving woman. Whether her training to be a kindergarten teacher is ever carried into practice or not, she will show herself to be a broader, truer woman for it, no matter what walk in life she pursues.

The principles and methods of natural development are rapidly gaining preference throughout the South. The kindergarten is only the beginning and foundation of this new education. It takes the child when it is the most impressionable, between the ages of three and six years.

The new training class begins early in September and will be limited to twenty-five. Any one desiring to enter the class should apply early to Miss A. E. Bryan, 1054 Fourth Ave., Louisville, Ky.

A Symptom is Not a Disease.

The suffering rheumatic would look incredulous if told his rheumatism was not a disease. Also the sufferer from catarrh, with his sore, tender and exuding nostrils, if told catarrh was only a symptom. Yet such it is, in fact. The disease from which a man or woman suffers who has rheumatism or catarrh is blood poison. How did the poison get into the blood? From various causes: colds, exposure, indigestion, contagion, etc., may have been the cause. No matter, your blood is impure, and you will suffer just so long as this great stream of life is clogged with particles of impurity. Then why not strike at the root or cause of your rheumatism or catarrh by annihilating the enemies of good health that exist in your blood? This can be done by using Dr. Bull's Sarsaparilla. Its alterative virtue will quickly cleanse the blood of every impurity, and thousands have thus by its use been permanently cured of rheumatism and catarrh. No other remedy in the world acts so powerfully and yet so harmlessly as a blood purifier. It conquers all the morbid tendencies to eruptive, irritating and painful ailments.

GIRLS WHO ENTERTAIN.

Why They Are Sure to Receive Attention From Young Men.

"If I were a girl desirous—as every young woman is—of being a belle," said a well-known society man to a reporter the other day, "I would, beyond all else, entertain."

"And why so?"

"Because entertaining is more sure than anything else productive of attention from men. Even the ugliest girl will not be a wall-flower if plenty of parties are given at her house. You see the men—particularly the young ones—are not going out in society for philanthropic or unselfish motives; it is merely a question with most of them how much in the way of fun and good things to eat or drink they can get. As for giving anything in return, in a material sense, there is not much possibility of that. Washington bachelors, as a rule, not rich—many of them who frequent the best houses and move in the fashionable swim, in fact, are department clerks, living on small incomes—and they are not expected to send costly bouquets and give theater parties in acknowledgment of the civilities shown them. Nor is it especially desirable that they should, for, if they have not means, there are plenty of other people about who have millions to throw away, and there is no good reason wherefore these impetuous beaux should not have a share of the superficialities thus distributed. Besides, it is not true that they have nothing to offer in exchange. As for their powers of making themselves agreeable worth something? It can't be said that they don't fill a useful place in the gay world, for what sort of a time would the dear girls have without them?"

"But the point we were discussing was girls entertaining."

"Exactly, and I am getting to it most directly. The men, like the young women, go out to have the best obtainable—and their object is chiefly to entertain—and they are not expected to be so much as many nice parties and to be feasted as often and as pleasantly as may be possible. So it comes about very naturally that a girl who entertains attracts the masculine element in society very much in the same way and for the same reason that an accessible piece of toasted cheese draws the mice that are anxious for a nibble. The men seek to be introduced to her and do their best to make themselves agreeable; they make a point of asking her to dance often, and thus she is pretty sure of a good time. At her own house, of necessity, she receives plenty of attention. It is an immense help to a young woman socially to entertain. On the other hand, a girl who is a success without entertaining must be a belle indeed."

"To be such, of course, beauty is the most necessary quality, do you not think?"

"No, I do not. The value of beauty to a girl is incalculable; but, in my opinion, the quality that makes a young woman most sought by men is vivacity and sparkle. To be a belle of the first water she must have this, backed by prettiness and tact, and must entertain. If she is known to have money of her own, or even in expectation, it is an immense help. However, my observation hasn't been that any amount of money will make an unattractive girl a belle. There are always some men who will hang around a rich girl with the notion of capturing her fortune, but they are marked exceptions and the gossip soon spots them as money-hunters. Fellows who amount to anything won't do that. There is lots of money in the world, and millions of dollars—but the poor men somehow don't seem to succeed in grabbing it."—Washington Star.

His Wife Suffered From Erysipelas.

Mr. John O. Rogers, of Dana, Illinois, writes as follows under date of March 27, 1890: "My wife was for years an invalid from a blood trouble, and suffered terribly at times from Erysipelas. She tried many remedies advertised as blood purifiers, but received no benefit. A few bottles of Swift Specific (S. S. S.) cured her of Erysipelas and other blood troubles. From the first her appetite increased, and her general health improved in every way. She considers S. S. S. the best blood purifier and tonic she ever saw, and is willing for any one suffering as she was to be referred to her."

His Blood Poisoned by Cow Itch.

About five years ago my blood was poisoned with cow itch, and every spring since then I have been troubled with the poison breaking out in large sores all over my body. I tried various remedies with out receiving any benefit. Three bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) effected a complete and permanent cure, when all other blood remedies had failed."

PROPOSING BY PHONOGRAPH.

The Scheme of a Bashful Young Man and Why He Succeeded.

While a phonograph was on exhibition up town a short time ago it was put to a use which even the "Wizard" Edison probably never thought that it would be. At an hour when there were few people in the place a well-dressed, good-looking young man came in and stood for some time watching and listening to the wonderful machine. After a short time he entered into an earnest conversation with the man who had invited him to the place, and at last he proposed to the young woman who stood by his side. The visitor looked nervously around, but as there was no one near-by, he began talking into the machine. He said only a few words, and then, turning to the operator, he said earnestly:

"Remember, tomorrow!"

The man smiled again and nodded his head. The next day at about the same hour the nervous visitor of the day before appeared at the place again, but this time he was not alone. Accompanying him was a pretty young man about nineteen years old. The young man was more nervous than ever, and while the couple were looking about the place and examining the different articles on display, the young woman noticed her companion's uneasiness and spoke to him about it several times. He passed the matter over lightly, though rather awkwardly, and assured her that there was nothing the matter with him. She plainly saw that something was wrong and suggested that they should go out of the place. At this suggestion he earnestly, almost with desperation, protested, and insisted that they must not go until they had heard the phonograph. She consented, and so they went over near it. As they approached, the operator gave the young man a smile of approval. The young man drew his companion close to the instrument, all the time growing more nervous the more he glanced around looking for a convenient and safe retreat. The strains of a lively waltz began to flow from the instrument, then suddenly the music ceased, and after a second's pause the young woman heard the voice of her companion addressing her. The words that she heard were so unexpected that she glanced quickly at his face, but his lips were tightly closed and he was looking straight at the machine. Her look followed his and this is what she heard come from the phonograph:

"Maze, I have loved you for a long time, but have never dared to tell you so; will you be my wife?"

The operator watched the pair out of the corner of his eye, an amused smile playing about his mouth in the meantime. When the sentence was completed he discreetly started the machine to singing: "Down Went Montgomery to the Bottom of the Sea."

The young woman remained silent for a moment, looking straight ahead, then turned toward her companion. There was no mistaking that look. He appeared to be choking, so red was his face. She blushed violently and touching him on the arm, while her face was turned from him, she said in a voice not at all steady:

"Come, let us go."

As they disappeared through the door the operator laughed quietly to himself and muttered:

"Variety is the spice of life, sure."

A few days afterward the young man appeared again, and this time his face was wreathed in smiles as he approached the phonograph man. He shook him heartily by the hand and said:

"She called me a coward, but I don't care, it's all right now, many thanks."—N. Y. Tribune.

UNWORTHY WEAPONS.

Those Used by Women in Controversies With Their Sisters.

In a journal written by women and for women we learn again that the cruel and unkind words which women can sit by the bedside of the sick; who through the long weary hours of the night can minister to the wants of suffering humanity; who can take on themselves moral burdens from which a man would shrink; who can be long suffering and yet permit those mean little sins to creep into their lives and eat away the perfection of their characters like moths do a garment. With the advancement of her sex, let each resolve that the thoughtless word shall stop on her lips—drive the envious look from her eyes, and when there is a feeling at her heart strongly suggestive of hatred, let her try to think how she would feel if she thought some other woman had just such feelings toward her. Don't let it any longer be woman against woman. Don't let it be the idle hand, or the hand raised partly to strike, but

DAYS OF REGISTRATION:

June 6, 7, 13 and 14 at all Voting Places.

In his speeches at Church Hill and in the court house last week Mr. Givens attempted to answer the charges of inconsistency brought against him by the KENTUCKIAN. He admitted supporting Laffoon, who introduced two public building measures in one session, while he is now opposing Ellis, who has introduced but one. His explanation was that none of Laffoon's three opponents in 1886 made the question an issue and, as they all occupied the same position, he voted for Laffoon for personal reasons, without endorsing his record. This explanation may be satisfactory in Mr. Givens' mind, but it is strange, very strange, how he can reconcile his duty as a conscientious citizen with the support of a candidate whose course in "robbing" the people rendered him, in his estimation, unfit to be trusted with a seat in Congress. The plain truth is that Mr. Givens' position on this question is simply ridiculous. It has been the policy of the government for many decades to expend a stated amount every year in public buildings located in important cities and towns. Both parties have alike advocated it. Many cities have secured these improvements and Congressmen have vied with each other in their efforts to make themselves "solid" by getting appropriations for their districts. It is a fact that a bill was at one time proposed, and is likely to be passed some day, to erect a public building in every town of 5,000 people. This ought to be done. The government is abundantly able to own its own postoffices and custom houses. This plank of Mr. Givens' platform is as unique and original as his other idea that he ought to be elected to Congress and kept there until he grows gray in the service or catches Bright's disease or some other popular malady from excessive and protracted long living. It is hard to understand how any man could object to having a portion of the government's savings expended on improvements in his own district or town, and we do not believe there are fifty men in Christian county who would not like to see Hopkinsville get a nice public building. It would give employment to the laboring men and scatter thousands of dollars over the county to find their way into the avenues of local trade. Let Mr. Ellis promise such a building as a certainty and his majority would be 2,000 in the county and even the Republicans would be ready to move to make it unanimous.

The Republican House committee on Elections has reported in favor of unseating Congressman Venable, of Virginia, and Elliott, of South Carolina, and giving their places to a couple of negroes named Langston and Miller. It is understood that the seat of Gen. Catchesings will also be given to a negro named Hill, which will make four colored persons on the Republican side, the fourth being Cheatham, of North Carolina.

Senator Carlisle has no intention of being kept silent by the unwritten law of the Senate, which keeps new members in the background for two years. He was born great and does not have to pursue the usual slow methods of achieving greatness. He has already served notice that he is loaded for the McKinley bill, and his speech will be the ablest effort heard in the Senate on that iniquitous scheme for robbing the people.

Gov. Buckner has appointed, subject to the approval of the President, Hon. Jas. A. McKenzie and Hon. John Bennett as Kentucky's Commissioners for the World's Fair in 1892. The appointments are for several years and pay handsome salaries. This appointment will remove all probability of Mr. McKenzie's becoming a candidate for Congress this year.

THE GRANGE SALE.

Fancy Prices Realized for Fat Cattle—A Pleasant and Successful Day.

The annual stock sale of Church Hill Grange on last Friday was in many respects the most successful one ever held. The stock brought high prices and the farmers were all pleased with the outcome. Following is a statement of the Most of the large sellers bought up cattle last winter at very cheap rates and the high prices enabled them to realize handsome profits. Quite a number of them made two hundred per cent. on their investments.

The weather was clear and favorable, though a trifle too warm, and nothing occurred to mar the success of the day's business.

The crowd, owing to the absence of a free dinner, was not as large as usual, but the attendance was large enough and everything was more satisfactory. No one present failed to get enough to eat, as the generous and hospitable grangers invited everybody, strangers and all, and after the large crowd had been fed, and well fed at that, many basketsful of fragments were gathered up. There were none of the disgraceful scenes around the table that had characterized past occasions, but everything was done decently and in order, most of the tables being spread on the ground picnic fashion.

The usual committees had charge of the various branches of the sale. An abundance of ice-water was supplied for all, the carriages and vehicles were all kept in place and the stock pens were presided over by competent committee-men. The sale was finished before dinner, owing to the spirited bidding.

Dr. B. S. Wood, Boales & Girard, W. J. Withers and other local dealers were the principal buyers.

After dinner Mr. Clarence C. Givens made a political speech in the school house and the candidates took possession of the outside crowd and vied with each other in their attentions to the voters. It was a great day all round.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Capt Ellis' recent tariff speech elicited the following compliment from the New York Sun: "The next speaker was a gentleman from Kentucky. He had a smooth face and a boyish appearance. It was Hon. W. T. Ellis. It was his maiden speech. The language was chaste, the argument compact and the ideas clearly expressed. It was a speech that stimulated thought and commanded attention. Kentucky may well be proud of the orator."

In view of the well-known fact that so many of the so-called fine whiskeys are but a vile compound of Essential Oils and common rectified spirits, producing mixtures totally unfit for consumption, we deem it proper to call the attention of consumers to the merits of I. W. Harper's Nelson County, Ky., Whiskey, which, absolutely pure, is made from fine selected grain and fully matured by age. Sole agents, Edmundson & Long, Hopkinsville, Ky.

Returns from 95 counties in the Clerkship race give Madden 179, Longmoor 164, Adams 146, Martin 110 and the other candidates have about 140 votes between them. The race is pretty apt to narrow down to Madden and either Longmoor or Adams. The convention meets at noon to-morrow.

E. M. Thomas Mf. Co. New York: I have often thought I would write and thank you for the wonderful Vitalia Capsules. I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion for twenty-three years. No one knows how much I have suffered. I could eat but little of the most delicate food; nothing seemed to assimilate. About three months ago I read your little book. I at once bought one box of your soft Capsules, and after taking the first dose I felt like another person. I was so relieved. The Vitalia Capsules, with the Vitalia Liver Pills, are the best remedies for dyspepsia and liver trouble I ever used. I feel safe in saying that if I continue to take the medicine and eat prudently they will effect a permanent cure.

MRS. J. B. ERWIN, 817 South Summer St., Nashville, Tenn. (Wife of Dr. Erwin, pastor of Elm Street church.)

My wife has found more relief from your Vitalia than from any remedy she has ever taken. I assure you of my own gratitude. Write to me for my own gratification, and to the credit of the medicine. J. B. ERWIN, D. D.

Dr. E. E. Hoss has been elected editor of the Christian Advocate, at Nashville, since Dr. Fitzgerald was elected a bishop. It was not considered irreverent to bring in another Hoss.

Stuart Cann, who formerly published a paper at Frankfort, is now a resident of Ashland, and a boomer. He was thrown from a buggy a few days since and had a rib broken. He thus describes his experience to an Ashland News reporter:

"It is my sixth rib in the left side that is broken," said Mr. Marion Stuart Cann, yesterday, as he lay propped up amid pillows in his room at the Aldine. On a table were three beautiful bouquets, sent to him by sympathizing friends. "This," he said, "is the fifth time that same rib has been broken. When I was walking away from a fence running small boy from a watermelon patch where I was not wanted, and broke it; once a base-ball ball slipped and broke it; then Bolivar, the big elephant in Forepaugh's circus, swung his trunk once at a boy who had given him a bucco, and missed the boy, but broke the rib again. The fourth time it was broken by my falling out of a tree at Birmingham, where I was rooting to report a secret meeting of a council committee. The tree was near the window, and as it was a dark night, I climbed up there to hear the meeting. One of the committeemen came to the window and threw a cigar stump out. It fell in the pocket of my sack coat and escaped immediate notice. It kept burning, however, and soon my coat-tail caught fire, and then began roasting me. In my surprise I lost my hold and fell from the tree. I hope this is the last time it will get smashed. I shall get a new rib if it keeps up."

If the bouquets mean anything, they mean that Mr. Cann can get a new "rib" without much trouble.

Buckner Leavell, the druggist, desires us to publish the following testimonial, as he handles the remedy and believes it to be reliable:

I bought a 50 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and applied it to my limbs which have been afflicted with rheumatism at intervals for one year. At the time I bought the Pain Balm I was unable to walk. I can truthfully say that Pain Balm has completely cured me. R. H. FARR, Holywood, Kan. Mr. A. B. Cox, the leading druggist at Holywood, vouches for the truth of the above statement.

In almost every neighborhood throughout the west there are one or more persons whose lives have been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or have been cured of chronic diarrhoea by it. Such persons take especial pleasure in recommending the Remedy to others. The praise that follows its introduction and use makes it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Buckner Leavell.

Lippincott's Magazine for June is a brilliant and eminently readable number. The complete novel is contributed by Mary E. Stickner, and is entitled "Circumstantial Evidence." It is a story of the misunderstandings, jealousies, and final reconciliation of a young couple, told in a natural and charming manner. The story is full of good situations, and here and there verges upon the tragic, but "all's well that ends well." The character of the impetuous, passionate "Nita," the young wife, is capital, drawn, as is also that of her husband. Altogether it is a very entertaining story, and though no moral obtrudes itself, it certainly points one, and a good, strong, healthy one, too.

Maj. Breath: has many regrets in the city who greatly regret his failure to get the postoffice appointment. CREAM OF NEWS.

The Brame Trial Postponed.

The Brame case was called in the Criminal Court at Nashville yesterday and continued at the instance of the attorney for the defense, until the 16th of June.

Overdosed Himself.

Friday afternoon Dr. Wm. M. Enqua, who had been quite nervous for several days, took a dose of belladonna to quiet his nerves. He soon realized that he had taken too much. Dr. Southall, whose office is in the same building, was called in at once and proceeded to relieve his brother physician. Dr. Enqua was in a bad condition and Dr. Stiles and a number of others of the profession visited him and the proper remedies being used, he was by midnight out of danger, and is now, though very weak, doing well.

Set Fire to the Calaboose.

Wm. Johnson, col., was arrested last Sunday afternoon for drunkenness and placed in the calaboose to await his trial as soon as Judge Brasher opened his court yesterday morning. Johnson didn't like confinement, and concluded to free himself if possible. Finding that the bars of his prison were fastened into pieces of wood which were let into the wall, he set fire to one of them Sunday night hoping soon to be able to burn his way out. His scheme would have worked all right had not Jordan Barker "caught on" to it. There were five or six others confined with him and of course all would have had a chance to make their escape had not Johnson's designs been frustrated. When Barker went into the room he found the sill burning brightly, but he at once put it out with a bucket of water. But for the timely entrance of Barker into the calaboose the city court room and surrounding buildings might have been burned.

Johnson's trial has been set for tomorrow. He is now in jail, where he will have no chance of burning his way out.

Marshal Geo. Hunter, a so-called detective from Bardston, publishes in the Courier-Journal an alleged explanation of the coal-throwing ghosts at Rev. Mr. Quail's last winter. He thinks the coal was thrown from the outside by enemies who raised the windows for that purpose. Mr. Hunter sheds no light on the subject, in fact he does not even make a correct statement of the affair. The public has long since made up its mind about the matter and it is no longer talked about here.

T. W. Wootton was arrested at the Grange Sale Friday on a charge of selling beer, but the warrant did not have the name of any witness upon it and Esq. McGaughey declined to take the bond offered and released Mr. Wootton without bond. Duiguid, col., was also arrested and put under a bond of $50 for having a keg of beer in his possession. He claims that he was left in charge of the keg by a party of gentlemen who carried it out for their own use. His trial is set for next Friday, before Judge Winfree.

NEW POSTMASTER.

Mrs. Wright Gets the Postoffice in this City.

The Appointment a Great Surprise.

President Harrison sent the name of Mrs. May H. Wright to the Senate on the 22nd inst., nominating her for postmaster at Hopkinsville, Ky. The first intimation received was a brief notice in the afternoon papers, which was bulletined at the KENTUCKIAN office Friday morning and took the city completely by surprise.

When the postoffice fight opened a year ago there were four applicants, viz: Maj. Jno. W. Breathitt, S. H. Harrison, Mrs. S. H. Burbridge and Mrs. May Hays Wright.

Maj. Breathitt was endorsed by the politicians and his nomination was soon regarded as an assured fact, although the President refused to remove the present postmaster until his time expired. Mrs. May Wright, however, went in person to Washington, and called upon Harrison and Wamamaker and urged her claims to the office. She also secured a lengthy petition and filed letters of endorsement from her pastor, Rev. W. L. Nourse, and other prominent Presbyterians. She has all along expressed great confidence, but few people about town believed she had any chance to get the office and it is not known just what strings were pulled to secure the plum.

Maj. Breathitt was of course taken greatly by surprise and will make an effort to re-open the case and get another chance at the office. He left Saturday for Owensboro and it is understood Messrs. Jolly and Feland will go to Washington in his behalf and try to have the nomination withdrawn. Mrs. Wright is the wife of Mr. Nat. T. Wright, who is an invalid and incapacitated from making a support. She is a native of Ohio and has for several years been engaged with her sister, Miss Alice Hays, in the millinery business here. She married Mr. Wright five or six years ago. She is young, handsome and a devout member of the Presbyterian church and her business ability and general fitness no doubt qualify her to make a good and efficient postmaster. She is a Republican, though her political opinions have never been publicly expressed and the Republicans are greatly dissatisfied because an active politician was not appointed. Mrs. Wright attributes her success not so much to her political backing as to the church influence brought to bear in her interest. She was treated almost to an ovation Friday and scores of people called to offer their congratulations. Mrs. Wright has but little doubt that she will be promptly confirmed by the Senate, as all of the objections now urged against her were embodied in papers on file with the President and were not sufficient to prevent her appointment.

The term of Postmaster McKenzie expires July 19, but he thinks the change will be made about June 30, at the end of the current quarter. Mrs. Wright declined to talk about her probable assistants in the office.

The Standard.

"I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla as having passed above the grade of what are commonly called patent or proprietary medicines," said a well known physician recently. "It is fully entitled to be considered a standard medicine and has won this position by its undoubted merit and by the many remarkable cures it has effected. For an alternative and tonic it has never been equaled."

Evergreen Lodge No. 38, K. of P., elected officers Thursday night for the term beginning July 1. Only about half of the officers are to be elected for six months, the others holding for a year. The higher officers were filled under the custom of promotion followed by the Lodge.

Glimer M. Bell was chosen C. C.; Jno. P. Campbell, V. C.; Ohio G. Lander, P. G.; H. Champlin M. at A.; Polk Carpenter Trustee for the long term. A. D. Rodgers, D. G. Wiley and C. E. Kennedy were chosen representatives to the grand Lodge meeting at Bowling Green. Eleven petitions for membership were received and referred and a special meeting called for last night for degree work.

THE MULE KICKED.

That is Why Headless Chickens Were Picked Up in Virginia.

There has been considerable gold found recently several miles north of the District line, and several shafts have sunk on various properties, all of which, to use the language of the boom, "exceed the most sanguine expectations of the promoters." Several farmers out near the seat of disturbance have been earning considerable money hauling ore from the shaft to Senator Sawyer's mill a few miles away.
The shafts are sunk and the ore extracted by the usual methods of drilling and blasting. For the latter purpose nitro-glycerine is used. One of the teamsters pulling several empty nitro-glycerine cars in his cart and took them to his home near Tarkenton Park, intending to clean them up and make pails of them. He set them down in the barn-yard while he was putting up the mules. A half-grown hog saw the cans, walked up and nuzzled them around. About a gill of the stuff had collected in the bottom of each, and the pig licked it down. It has a sweet flavor and is medicinal. Then the farmer came out, picked up the shafts and took them back into the house.
The pig chewed up a stray ear of corn, a dead rat, some corn-bushes and two or three other delicacies and ambled into the barn. Perhaps nothing would have happened if the razor-back had been gilded with ordinary intelligence, but what would possess him under the circumstances to go and scratch his head against the post of the off-mule's stall?
The understanding is, that the mule only human; they are not exempt from above, the foibles of mankind. When things go wrong with them they make the welkin ring with their wild "Hoo-aw"
"hee-aw" "hee-aw" and then kick like kicks like a Queen Anne's musket. So when the off-mule looked around and saw the pig scratching his back six inches from his heels, he straightened his neck, closed his eyes in brief and silent prayer, swung his sinister limb over his shoulder, and then struck out like Killy at the
bat. The pig described a beautiful parabola, screaming all the time like a three-hundred-pound shell from one of Admiral Porter's mortars, sailed out through the barn doors on a fat trajectory and struck on top of the hon-house.

Then came a clap of thunder sound; the pig, oh, where was he? Ask of the winds which whistled around the house, and the sea. The nitro-glycerine had exploded, slaying pig, henhouse and poultry into the middle of Ballyhoo. There hasn't a piece of that pig been found big enough to hold an inquest, nor a piece of hen-house big enough for a hen to pick her teeth on, and a colored man was arrested the other day for having in his bag some headless chickens, which he confessed he picked up over in Virginia. - Washington Post.

HUMAN MECHANISM.

Movements of Nerves and Muscles in Playing a Piece of Music.
Science, says Sir James Paget, will supply the natural man with wonders undreamed of. The author had once heard Mendelssohn play a prelude by Mendelssohn.
She played 5,500 notes in four minutes and the second. Every one of these notes involved certain movements of a finger, at least two, and many of them involved an additional movement laterally as well as those up and down. They also involved repeated movements of the wrist, elbow and arms, says a writer in the Popular Science Monthly, altogether probably not less than one movement for each note.

There were three distinct movements for each note. As there were twenty-four notes per second, and each of these notes involved three distinct musical movements, that amounted to seventy-two movements in each second.
Moreover, each of these notes was determined by the will to a chosen place, with a certain force at a certain time, and with a certain direction. Therefore, there were three distinct qualities each of the seventy-two movements of each second. Such were the transmissions outward. And all those were conditional on consciousness of the position of each hand and finger before it was moved, and by moving it to the end and the force of each touch. Therefore, there were three conscious sensations to every note.

There were seventy-two transmissions a second, 144 to and fro, and those with constant change of quality. And then, added to each of these movements, was remembering each note in its due time and place and was exercised in the comparison of it with others that came before. So that it would be fair to say that there was not less than 200 transmissions of each note to the brain outward and toward every second, and during the whole of that time judgment was being played better or worse than the notes of the music which the music was intended to inspire.

GOLD IN A CAVE.

When and Where the First Discovery of
It Was Made.
The first discovery of gold in a cave was made two years ago by George Benton in the Rock of Ages which he was developing. He struck a cave in the quartzite, and crumbled in the bottom of the cave was a rich collection of gold matter. D. C. Hartwell, an ore buyer of Orray, purchased the stuff which was shoveled from the bottom of the cave and paid $5,000 for it. Considerable interest was awakened by the discovery, though one or two claims had been held for three or four years by parties who thought there was gold in the veins, but were not nearly enough convinced to develop the same. Finally prospectors began to go over and look at the Rock of Ages, and some of them at once said they knew where there was more caves on the east side of the gulch, which led to the discovery of a number of rich and extensive deposits.
It is a singular condition of affairs and one new to every body in the district.
By mining men it is said to be a rare feature in ore deposits, and something entirely new in Colorado. The ground on the north side of the Uncompaghe has been run over for years by prospectors who were looking after fissure veins. Finding little encouragement to develop the vein, they turned to the quartzite, and that portion of the district was virtually abandoned. A few localities, however, were maintained by annual assessments, but without any knowledge of the ore values contained in the veins, though known to exist. - Denver Times.

- During the first ten months of last year 12,000 horses, of the value of $500, were exported from Great Britain, as compared with 11,000, of the value of $724,014, during the same period of 1888.

AUGUSTA'S FIRST LOVE.

A Romantic Story Concerning the Late Dowager-Empress.

A member of the suite of one of the best-known among the German Princesses tells a romantic story concerning the dead Empress Augusta, and it is believed that it has never been given to the public.

Augusta was a Princess in the petty court of Weimar, and when she was wedded about with all the right-laced etiquette the small German principalities affected. When she was seventeen she was a romantic girl and had learned by heart the stories of the previous half century's gallantries at the court of Louis Quatorze, and so well had she read that she was prepared to fall in love with any man who might first appear to her sense of beauty.

A young French noble stopped at the court of Weimar in the progress of a pleasure jaunt from Auvergne. He remained for some weeks at the palace and became a favorite of the Duke. At a court ball shortly following his arrival, he was getting up the mules. A half-grown hog saw the cans, walked up and nuzzled them around. About a gill of
the farmer came out, picked up the shafts
and took them back into the house.
The pig chewed up a stray ear of corn,
a dead rat, some corn-bushes and two or
the barn. Perhaps nothing would have
gilded with ordinary intelligence, but
what would possess him under the circumstances to go and scratch his head
against the post of the off-mule's stall?
The understanding is, that the mule
things go wrong with them they make
the welkin ring with their wild "Hoo-aw"
"hee-aw" "hee-aw" and then kick like
kicks like a Queen Anne's musket. So when the off-mule looked around and
from his heels, he straightened his neck,
closed his eyes in brief and silent prayer,
swung his sinister limb over his shoulder,
and then struck out like Killy at the
bat. The pig described a beautiful
three-hundred-pound shell from one of Admiral Porter's mortars, sailed out
through the barn doors on a fat trajectory and struck on top of the hon-
house.

The Duke and the Duchess were consumed with rage at the discovery. So high did feeling run in the court that the Duke's Chamberlain, who was the Frenchman to a duel, and the lover fell mortally wounded. As he fell the Frenchman tore open his tunic, and pressed against his heart, was a handkerchief belonging to the Princess.
Toward it he lay in the coffin, and it was at the moment he had seized the lace, and was struggling to carry it to his lips. The Duchess was so affected by the incident that she silently placed the handkerchief on the breast of the young man as he lay in the coffin, and was buried with him. His body was covered with roses strewn upon him by the devoted Augusta.

For weeks the Princess moped about the palace until her parents were convinced that her sorrow must have some relief or she would become insane.
They suggested a marriage with Prince William of Prussia, and the Princess gave her indifferent consent, careless and thoughtless what might become of her. With William it was a matter of equal importance, for he had first been crossed in a love affair, and he was heartbroken as well. There was no misunderstanding between them on the subject of their marriage. The Princess pressed always preferred French fashions, dress, sentiment, and it was her favorite language. - Berlin Cor. Philadelphia Press.

AN HOUR OF HORROR.

A Midnight Murd' Whose Perpetrator Was Never Brought to Justice.
It was close upon the hour of midnight.
A man sat alone in an upper chamber of a tumble-down tenement, a man whose face showed by its furrowed brow, glaring eyes and pallid lips the effects of a terrible mental struggle going on within him.
Before him were several pages of manuscript, and his nervous hand, convulsively clutching a pen, was rapidly adding to them.

Close to his right hand, and frequently touched by it as he penned his pen, was a gleaming pistol of ivory, silver and steel - a loaded revolver.
The window beside him was open, and through it the night breeze entered and fanned his hot brow. The night without was calm and placid. Nature was lovely, bathed in the light of a summer moon, but the man was oblivious to the beauties of the night. He glanced at the clock now and then, and, observing the long hand climbing up the incline toward the figure 12, he redoubled his labor at the manuscript.

Again he glanced at the revolver on the desk beside him. He touches its ivory handle, as if faltering in his resolution; and then he continues his writing.
Hark!
What sound is that that is borne on the breeze of the summer night?
A long, low wail, like the cry of a woman in mortal anguish.
The man starts like a guilty soul, dashes the dews of perspiration from his clammy brow, and utters an incoherent exclamation.
Again - again, that moaning, uncanny cry.
The man hears it and groans aloud.
He dashes aside the last page of his manuscript and glances again at the clock. The hands mark the hour of midnight. He grasps the revolver, and with a resolute air he exclaims: "It must be done."

Going to the window he fies toward it.
There was a scampering sound in the yard beneath, and next morning a wailing was found dead close to the wood-shed. The night police reporter had fulfilled his mission. - America.

Not many Eastern people, unless they are acquainted with the forests of the Mississippi valley, and more especially those found on the higher Allegheny mountains, know what a really large hickory tree is. The shell-barks of Southern Indiana are some times 150 feet tall, with trunks four feet in diameter; and here of limbs for seventy or eighty feet, and even larger trees can be found in the still almost untouched forests of Eastern Tennessee and Western North Carolina. But these large trees are doomed, and before many years have passed every hickory tree of sufficient size and proper quality will have been sacrificed to supply the ever-increasing demand for the wood. - Troy (N. Y.) Times.

Luminous Key-Holes.

An escutcheon for a luminous key-hole has been designed, which will be especially convenient on closets, chests, etc., in dark places and also to the journeyman who has no light at his elbow.
The escutcheon carrying the key-hole is formed of glass, and has a concave or recessed back, to which is applied a coat of phosphorescent paint, which is covered with a coat of cheaper or ordinary paint. The light from the phosphorescent paint, which is applied to the back of the key-hole, will be reflected by the glass in the ordinary way, and it will protect the phosphorescent paint from abrasion and discoloration. - Louisville Courier-Journal.

A big Newfoundland dog recently saved six lives in Allegheny City. About one o'clock in the morning the dog awoke his master, Mr. F. D. King, by loud barking. Repeated efforts to quiet the barker failed, and looking out of the window, King discovered that the house building was in flames. He called for assistance, and succeeded in rescuing from the burning building the members of three families.
